PROFILE

Career

Cheyenne studied law at Ludwig-Maximilians-University in Munich, with a special interest in "Criminal Justice, Criminal Defense and Prevention" and a particular focus on white-collar crime and criminal procedure.

After completing her legal clerkship at stetter Rechtsanwälte in 2022, Cheyenne joined the firm in 2023 as an Associate. Since 2026, she has been a Senior Associate at stetter Rechtsanwälte.

Cheyenne provides legal counsel and representation to individuals and companies in matters related to white-collar criminal law, such as allegations of fraud or embezzlement. Her practice focuses on defense and representation in (complex) criminal tax proceedings, particularly those arising from tax audits. In this context, Cheyenne regularly deals with issues surrounding the treatment of permanent establishments under trade tax law, including those related to the private equity industry. She also defends clients in extensive "Cum-Ex" proceedings.

Furthermore, Cheyenne has broad trial experience, having defended individuals in court at both the first and second instances in various white-collar and criminal tax proceedings over the past few years.

In addition, Cheyenne is dedicated to upholding the legal rights of detainees. In her inaugural year at the firm, she played a pivotal role in significantly enhancing the rights of pre-trial detainees in a German prison. Through her efforts, the visiting hours for all pre-trial detainees in the facility, which had long been curtailed, were extended to meet statutory minimum requirements.

Beyond her legal acumen, Cheyenne prioritizes providing compassionate support to her clients and their families during the emotionally difficult and stressful period of criminal proceedings.

In 2025, Cheyenne successfully completed the theoretical portion of her certification as a specialist in criminal law.

Experience

Cheyenne is representing and represented clients in very significant criminal matters in Germany. Her top three representations include the following matters:
